

Spouse Employment Assistance

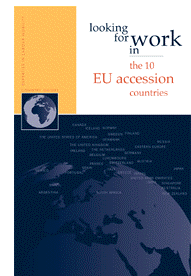

“Practical solutions for practical matters” A workshop that helps the spouse to settle-in

- Research confirms: Spouse satisfaction ensures (early) success in expatriate postings.
- Tackle the spouse issue effectively when it comes to working abroad.

Accompanying your partner to another country may seem daunting at first - but you have started to like the idea – and what’s more – you have decided to start looking for work in your host country. But where do you find information, what can you expect during an application interview, can you indeed phone up prospective employers and are references required?

Expertise in Labour Mobility provides accurate information on the job-hunting process in over 40 countries to their 'Looking for work in ...' guides. In addition the guides, Expertise in Labour Mobility has developed a special workshop to help people understand the job hunting process in their new country. The workshop provides useful tips, gives insight in the skills most sought after and helps professionals to apply successfully in their host country.

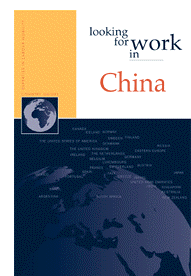

After the workshop you will feel more at ease when looking for a job. We will have discussed practical information and real-life examples on cultural management differences, work habits, application procedures and national differences in CV writing.

Workshop leader:

Mrs Nannette Ripmeester, director and founder of Expertise in Labour Mobility (www.labourmobility.com), will run the workshop. Nannette herself has worked at the European Commission in Brussels – a multicultural hotspot in itself – and subsequently she worked in 17 different countries.

The workshop has been designed by Expertise in Labour Mobility. A knowledge-based consultancy, specialised in customising solutions for international labour mobility. With research, information provision, and training ELM enhances international assignments. ELM's greatest strength is in helping businesses and individuals to become an integral part of the global workplace.

Each participant will receive one of the ELM guides on Looking for work in ..., on the country of their choice.

Workshops will be organised on a chosen premise, in close collaboration with the client.
