Editorial Review

The Looking for work in China guide tells you about CV writing, recruitment practice, country profile and management differences. It's the first step on your route to success abroad. Because, an international career needs more than just a mere CV translation!

Country Profile

- China is the most populated country in the world with 1,338,612,968 populations.
- In 1970s China opened their market. Started in 90s up until now China has become the fastest growing economy in the world.

Work permits in China

- China has very strict immigration rules due to a large native population.
- Contact the Chinese embassy in your home country for further information about work permits & visas.

Writing a CV and application letter in China

- The key focus of your resume should be to persuade the employer to invite you for an interview. Therefore, your resume is a marketing tool, which should be adapted to the market in which you intend to use it.
- Be modest in recommending yourself, the Chinese will appreciate this.

The application procedure in China

- To send your letter to a specified person at the human resource department is effective way to smoothen your application.
- In China, resume, copies of diplomas, certificates and often a 'Hukou' (residence ID) is commonly enclosed in job application.

Management culture in China

- A network of personal connections – called 'guanxi' – is very important in China.
- If you want to know more about management culture in China, The Looking for Work in China guide is your ultimate tool!
