

Escape the Credit Crunch - Go to Canada

Yes, we know there is a global crisis... But why would you stay in your current home country looking for a job when the chances to succeed are getting fewer? Why not pack your bags and make a dream come true? Escaping the global credit crunch is not easy, but with a 3.4% annualized GDP decline the Canadian economy seems to be doing a lot better than that of many other countries (6.2% drop in the US, 12.7% in Japan and 20.8% in South Korea to name a few). Helping the international job seeker on his/her way, a new Expertise in Labour Mobility (ELM) country guide is available now! If we got you thinking – read on because we've got the information to make it work for you in Canada.

Let's start by looking at the organisational structure of most Canadian companies: The tendency to be flat offers individuals the prospect to be seen as an expert in their field of expertise. In the current economic climate this offers opportunities for those who know how to seize the chances and make a success of their emigration or assignment.

With the newly revised guide book 'Looking for work in Canada', international jobseekers will have all the information they need, in order to start or continue their career on the Canadian labour market. Main author of the series is Nannette Ripmeester, an internationally acclaimed expert on this subject. Assisted by various specialists in the country, Nannette explains just what makes the difference between success and failure when it comes to looking for a job in Canada.

Just recently ELM released a new edition of 'Looking for work in South Africa'. Already this guide received positive feedback by Anine Swanepoel, Marketing, PR and International Relations Officer at the Office for International Education at the Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University: "The Booklet titled "Looking for work in South Africa" is a very helpful guide which will answer all your questions related to working and finding a job in South Africa. It provides a complete overview of the country, its culture, business behaviour and many other helpful hints. As a South African I found the booklet to be well researched and was surprised to find so many valuable insights into our market. This is a one stop shop for job searching in South Africa. A job very well done!!"

ELM's Canada guide is this one stop shop for job seekers, immigrants, organisations and expats wanting to get to grips with the Canadian market. Having published a series of guides called 'Looking for work in ...', available for over 40 countries, Expertise in Labour Mobility is a knowledge broker when it comes to issues of international labour mobility.
